Each member serves for two years and may stand again once, after which a year must pass before standing again.

Two short poems set side by side, as an anthology prints them on facing halves of the page.

The rain came down
upon the town
and all was grey
the livelong day

The sun rose bright
with morning light
and birds took wing
to greet the spring

Both are by the same hand, written a year apart, and they were first printed together in a small magazine.

Dear Jane, thank you for your letter of last week. I was glad to hear that the move went well and that the new place suits you all.
