An opening paragraph in plain English that runs the full width of the page, so the page's text edges are the margins of the body text.

> This indented quotation is justified, and it mentions the greeting שלום עליכם in the middle of a long sentence that keeps going across the line so that it wraps several times, with ברוכים הבאים appearing again later in the quotation and once more near תודה רבה at the end of the passage.

- A first level item.
  - A second level item whose text is long enough to wrap onto more lines, mentioning the Hebrew name ירושלים and the phrase בית ספר as it goes, so that some of its lines end at the right margin of the page while starting far in.
  - Another second level item that also wraps, naming חנות ספרים and then continuing with more English words so the continuation line is full.

A closing paragraph in plain English that runs the full width of the page, so the page's text edges are the margins of the body text.
